

AA212 Immigration and Immigration Problems

Faculty of Health Sciences- Elective course

Credit: 3 ECTS: 4

Course Description: This elective course offered by the Faculty of Health Sciences explores the multifaceted issues surrounding immigration, addressing historical perspectives, theoretical frameworks, and contemporary challenges associated with global migration. Through an interdisciplinary lens, students will analyze the impact of migration on various aspects of society, including health, education, and family dynamics. The course also incorporates cinematic case studies to deepen understanding and foster critical thinking.

Course Outcomes:

- Understand key concepts related to immigration and migration problems.
- Analyze and critically evaluate various theories explaining the phenomenon of migration.
- Examine the historical context of migration, both globally and within the Turkish context.
- Investigate the reasons behind migration and its wide-ranging consequences on individuals and societies.
- Explore the intersection of globalization and migration management.
- Assess the role and impact of migration policies on different regions.
- Evaluate the relationship between migration and education, considering its implications for individuals and communities.
- Examine the intersection of migration and health, exploring the challenges and opportunities associated with migrant health.
- Analyze the impact of migration on family structures and dynamics.
- Engage in a critical examination of migration through the lens of cinema, using case studies for in-depth analysis.
- Participate in vibrant discussions and case analyses related to migration and cinema.
- Synthesize knowledge acquired throughout the course to contribute to a comprehensive understanding of migration-related issues.