

HEM758 Gender Studies

Faculty of Nursing – Elective course

Credit: 3 ECTS: 7,5

Course Description: This course provides a comprehensive exploration of the concept of gender within societal frameworks, examining the construction and impact of gender roles, identities, and power dynamics across historical and contemporary contexts. Students will critically analyze the intersections of gender with other social categories, fostering a nuanced understanding of the complexities surrounding gender issues.

Course Outcomes:

- Understand the historical and cultural foundations of gender and its evolution over time.
- Analyze the social construction of gender roles and identities.
- Evaluate the impact of gender on individuals and societies from various perspectives.
- Critically examine the intersections of gender with race, class, sexuality, and other identity markers.
- Develop a sensitivity to diverse experiences and perspectives related to gender.
- Explore the role of power and privilege in perpetuating gender inequalities.
- Identify and assess key theoretical frameworks in gender studies.
- Engage in informed discussions on contemporary gender issues and debates.
- Apply analytical skills to assess and challenge gender-based stereotypes and discrimination.
- Develop strategies for promoting gender equity and inclusivity in various social contexts.